Benjamin Homans was born in 1787. From 1810 through 1812 he served as The Massachusetts Secretary of the Commonwealth (Secretary of State).

He then moved to Washington DC where he served as Chief Clerk of the US Navy. In 1814, as the British troops approached, Homans was ordered to save as much of the Navy's records and memorabilia as possible. In his words:

On Sunday three of the clerks were employed packing up in boxes and trunks, all the books of record, papers, library, maps, charts, plans, stationary, trophies, various valuable instruments, paintings, prints, &c., ready for removal on the next day; and in the evening of Sunday, the 21st of August, two river boats, with their crews, were engaged for the purpose at the ordinary pay and wages.

On Monday, the 22d August, two of the city carts were engaged, and all the boxes and articles in the Navy Department (heavy desks and furniture excepted,) were put on board a boat at the nearest wharf to the offices, and at 4 P.M. preceded up the river, as far as Georgetown. ...

On Tuesday, the 23d August, the chief clerk [Homans], with one of the clerks of the Department, proceeded up the river Potomac, and passed through the locks and canal to a place of safety. There was no difficulty in procuring more boats and men enough to navigate them up the river above the falls.

Homans was the acting Secretary of the Navy between the appointment of Benjamin Crowninshield and his conformation.

Homans died in 1825.
