Dear Sir

I have received letters from several persons of Manila up to the 29 November, among them one from your house wherein they state that on account of the meeting or insurrection which took place in the Province of Tayabas, the Government of Manila had demanded a Regiment or two of European troops to be sent thither. This demand will afford a good passage for the Colon, if we can succeed in embarking 400 or 500 Soldiers; for which object it will be necessary to broach the matter in your quarter. ington for the ceremony and to hand him tissues as needed. He's become a sentimental old coot.) On June 16, Barbara Nicklaus, Jack's wife of 55 years, received the USGA's highest honor, the Bob Jones Award. Yes, Jack cried. On Dec. 15, in New York City, Nicklaus received the SPORTS ILLUSTRATED Muhammad Ali Legacy Award, which honors a former athlete or other sports figure who has made the world a better place. It was part of a night that honored the magazine's Sportsperson of the Year. Serena Williams was the headliner but there was no undercard. Nicklaus won Sportsman in 1978.

As the evening approached, the golf legend was looking forward to his evening with the tennis legend. Nicklaus has a long list of favorite sports, and tennis, which he still plays a couple of times a week, is near the top of it. He mostly plays doubles, on one of the three grass courts in his backyard in South Florida. Jack makes the sides, adjudicates the close calls, hands out the barbs, pours the iced tea. If you want an Arnold Palmer, you can get it yourself.

Fifty-three years after Jack won his first major, in a playoff over Arnold at the 1962 U.S. Open, they remain close friends. Rivals too. As he took on Palmer, Nicklaus took on the rest of them. From the '60s through the '80s, Nicklaus sometimes beat and often lost to Palmer, Gary Player, Billy Casper, Lee Trevino, Raymond Floyd, Hale Irwin, Tom Watson, Greg Norman, Seve Ballesteros, Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green and other Hall of Famers—colorful, tough men with sui generis golf swings. They improved Jack, and Jack improved them. Nicklaus was not only golf's greatest winner but its greatest loser too. His grace in defeat is an elemental part of him. "My father said, 'Make 'em feel like you are happy for them, even if you don't mean it,' " Nicklaus said recently.

Nicklaus is humbled to receive an award named for boxing's most transcendent figure. "Ali was a great champion," Nicklaus said over the course of a lunch interview that stretched to 3½ hours. "I haven't always agreed with everything he did or said. He taunted some of those guys, didn't he? Joe Frazier? But I've always admired him as an athlete, how he stood up for what he believed in, and what he did for his sport. I didn't meet him until 1996. The PGA Championship was in Louisville. Ali and I were clowning around, and somebody got a picture of it. It's hanging in my office at home." That office is crowded with photos, chiefly of family members. Search the walls high and low: The only athlete you will find is Ali, unless you count Nicklaus.

You should count Nicklaus, and not just because he played football, basketball, baseball and golf in his mid-century, mid-country, middle-class (upper division) boyhood in Columbus, Ohio. Nicklaus's strong and limber body held up for a ridiculously long time. Between his years as a leading amateur, dominating touring pro and elite senior player, Nicklaus had a 40-year playing career. He won the 1986 Masters at age 46, his 18th major. (Tiger has been stuck on 14 since 2008.) Memo to the kids, straight from the man: Strong and limber is where it's at. As for the gym, Nicklaus never liked to lift anything heavier than a small bowl of ice cream.

Nicklaus's second career, as a golf-course architect, has lasted even longer than his playing career. He has designed or renovated about 300 courses, and what he's learned you cannot teach. "Looking back at it, a lot of the courses I built were too hard," Nicklaus said. "But I was hired by clients who wanted me to build them hard courses."

"Jack's legacy as an architect is similar

It rained here a bit Friday morning, but it cleared up nicely.

Friday night it has rained ever since we got up. It is about eleven now. Yesterday we had a great time. We walked to Nunda - 6 miles. We started about 9 o'clock and got there about 11.10. That is pretty good. It was too late to go home then for lunch.
